One thing that has not changed, though, is strict device limitations on the Remote PS4 playback function for streaming your games. The ability has always been there, but you had to have a smartphone iPhone or Sony to get the best possible experience at the end of Now Update: the Remote Play PS4 on the Google Play Store officially supports all Android devices from Android 5 e beyond. The magisk steps in the guide below are no longer necessary for installation, so just download the official application to any device, and you're in place. If you are rooted, you need to use Magisk Hide along with a randomized package name in Magisk Manager to mask your main status. The updated PS4 Remote application application requires Android 10 to a minimum to use a Dualshock 4 controller with Bluetooth Connection. If you have Android 9 and below, you can always try a wired connection or even go with the XPOSED module outlined in step 5 of this guide. The XPOSED module is intended for expert users, so make sure you know what you are doing before you jokes with it. There of a Magisk module from the Seyaru developer called PS4 Remote Reproduction Enabler, which is a very suitable name for what Realize. Initially started by Leolawliet Developer for XPOSED, this module updated brings Magisk compatibility with it. This means that SafetyNet controls will successfully pass without any Worries. once This module is installed on the system, you will be able to raise such device restrictions and stream all your PS4 games right of any phone you want a just as if you are They were officially supported. You will also be able to update the official application on the Play Store, which makes things even better. Date all this information, let's try not to waste more time and dive right into the guide below. There are three quick parts for the initial configuration before you can start any PS4 game on your phone. The first thing you need to do is take the Magisk module that allows non-SONY devices to use the right app from the Play Store in SA ©. Then you have to download the Remote application game, followed by hiding it with Magisk Hide since it can detect the main current status. head to the Magisk Manager application, touch the menu on the left, then go to "Downloads". Touch the search icon, then search for "PS4", and it should pop-up immediately with the form required for this guide as the only voice. Touch the download arrow, click on "Install", then the module will start the installation. Once finished, touch the "Reboot" button at the bottom to restart and activate the module. Now that you have returned from rebooting, you will be able to download the same PS4 Remote reproduction app that Sony uses for its officially supported devices. This new feature opens a whole new world of possibilities since it will not be limited to a few elected devices. USually, the Remote PS4 reproduction item on the Play Store would be hidden by unsupported devices, but you can easily access now at any time with the form Installed. Follow the link below to download and install the official application so you can be a step forward towards PS4 game on your phone. PLAY Connecting the deposit: PS4 Remote playback If you get a "non-supported device" error message or "Unable to install PS4 Remote playback" may need to delete data for the Play Store before installing the application. Head to the system and look settings for which you can manage installed applications. In You can search for the system settings for "Play Store" to bring up the app information directly on the spot for quick access. Once on the main page for the management of the Play Store, go to "Storage", then tap "Clear memory". A pop-up lets you know that the application will be restored, so just touch "OK" to confirm the choice. All means this is that the Play Store is updated as if it was installed for the first time. This allows changes from the Magisk module to work properly from this point on a fresh fresh Before opening the PS4 Remote App playback, you need to use Magisk Hide to hide your root state from before. If you don't, you will be welcomed with "the error has occurred a" pop-up every time with the error code "88001003." This is their very general way to simply say "you are rooted" without actually spelling out. Fortunately, we happen to be a simple solution like the application Expected. Open Magisk Manager, tap the menu on the left, then go to "Magisk Hide". Tap the search icon at the top right and search for "Remote playback PS4" or simply scroll through the list and find the Remote Play PS4 that way. Once found, touch the circle to put a check mark in it, which will activate the Hide Magisk function for that application now. You don't need to restart and no error code more or! You will also be able to randomize your package name for Magisk Manager for further hiding your origin status from the PS4 Remote Reproduction App. It's quite easy to do, but follow the link below to configure the real real monitoring. Once you have a randomized package name, you can go to the next phase Below. More Info: your randomize package name is Magisk Manager before starting with the Remote application game, make sure the "Enable remote playback option "It's turned on for your PS4 console. Head to the following section on your PS4 system to check that before passing. You will not actually have to do anything here before setting the phone with the PS4, but the option needs to be on the first one can be connected remotely. Settings -> Remote playback Connection settings Now is the time to open the PS4 Remote App playback and start with the good stuff! The first thing from pop-up is a screen that asks if you want to record a Dualshock 4 controller via Ether. Since you are on an unsupported device, using the conventional method to connect the wireless controller probably won't work properly. Skip the controller configuration for this time and continue. On the main page, tap the "Start" button to start the phone connection process to the PS4 console. You will have to log in with your PlayStations Access credentials as usual before moving forward with this guide. Once done, the Remote Application PS4 playback will start looking for the PS4 via a Wi-Fi network scan. Make sure your PS4 is turned on, and the network matches your phone as well. It should find, record, then connect to the PS4 automatically within 60 seconds or less in most cases. Once it is successfully connected, you should be sitting at the same phone screen as a real PS4 system. Now you have remotely connected the phone not supported to your PS4! Since the control situation is a bit different, this leaves you with two main options and a more advanced solution for the highly determined. You can stick with the Touch Screen base controls, or you can connect the controller with a Micro USB / OTG cable adapter, if necessary, for more recent phones. I suggest you try a cable controller connection for the best possible experience using Remote Play. For the brave and experienced, there is an XPOSED module that should activate wireless controller functionality as a supported device. It's called "DS4Adapter", and you can or can work for all the configurations outside. It is worth a shot, if you are determined and have the know-how using the XPOSED platform. If you want to try it and get installed xposed, check my following guide to get that started. more info: install xposed on almost Android phone running 10 and below the main screen of the Remote application game, touching the settings icon at the top right, you open some useful settings we recommend you check. The most important thing here would be the "Video Quality for Remote Play" setting, which can be changed at any time. Depending on your home network, you may need to make some changes to get the desired result for a more easy stream. You can set the "Resolution" and "Frame Rate" for what works best for your personal game needs and the network network Capacity. If your home network speed are reliable, go up higher with these settings, but do the opposite if the network is not so big. When it comes to frame rate, we advise you to set it to "High" to make sure you get that the 60 fps gameplay during the remote playback session. Now that you have all set up, it's time to come back football and enjoy your PS4 games as you never thought that you could a distance from the TV! You have to stay on the same Wi-Fi network of the PS4 system, but you can play until you have a wireless connection. The audio also gets right in streaming on the phone, which means that you can use headphones totally with it like Well. Once once upon time, you could do this without being rooted, but these methods are old and obsolete. Since the PS4 remote reproduction modified application stopped to get updated, it will not work every time Sony updates the application itself. Using this Magisk module allows you to download and update the application, just as it was using an official Sony device. Being able to do this as a regular application is the property benefit here.
