Personal descriptions

I consider myself as a hardworking and ambitious person. Programming is a major part of my life, and so I spend most of the day reading and searching and downloading ready code. At my free time, I like to solely walk, eat ice cream, and listening to music.

I am basically a simple, adjusting and fun-loving person, whom others consider as sincere and friendly too. But they also consider me as modest, and I don't know whether I am at this.

I would describe myself as a very ambitious, hardworking and sincere girl. I am enthusiastic about taking up new challenges in life. Friendly and joyful is what my friends would describe me as.

I am happy with my life. I am a nurturing person. I am always trying to help people in need even when I know they won't appreciate it. I can't help it. I am strong-minded. I am the person everyone comes to cry on my shoulder. I am a good listener. I think I am an overall good person. I try to be the best mother, daughter, and wife that I can be and that is all I can do.

I love life! Everyday is a new experience! I love to help others and enjoy laughing and watching others have a good time! I am a very honest person who will bust his butt to achieve goals in life! I am very into nature and will pull over on the side of the road to give a turtle so it doesn't get run over. I like all kinds of weather (except when it is over 80 degrees) I don't like watching people get hurt and I will defend people that can't defend themselves! I don't like people who lie or are high and mighty. People who purposely hurt others are scum and should be put away forever! But for the most part I am a content person who believes that we should all stop and enjoy life when ever we can because we are only here a short time and letting life slip by without enjoying it is a waste! I could go on and on but you get the idea of how I am!

Choose 7 things that can describe you completely. They must let people fully (or at least nearly) understand you!

How To Answer The "Tell Me About Yourself" Interview Question

(Examples Included)

Speech of Self-Introduction Based on a Personal Object (4 minutes)

Due date: 07/06/10
Oral presentation 25 points – Outline 10 points

The speech should be delivered extemporaneously from brief notes on 4 x 6 index cards. It is important to establish eye contact 50% of the time. You may have 15 seconds forgiveness either side. Additionally, the speech outlines must follow the template provided with this assignment.

In preparation for this speech, select an object that represents a significant aspect of your cultural background, personality, values, ambitions, etc. Using the chosen object as a point of departure, you should develop a speech that explains how it relates to your life.

For example, a new father might select a cloth diaper as a vehicle for discussing his attitude as a parent. An avid tennis player might settle on a tennis racket to illustrate her passion about the sport and how it relates to the personal background.

If possible, you should bring the object of your speech to class on the day of the presentation. If this is not possible because the object is too large, too rare, or too valuable, you should bring in a model, drawing, or photograph of the object.

The purpose of this speech is not to explain the object in detail, but to use it as a vehicle for the speaker to introduce herself or himself to the class.

ORGANIZATIONAL GUIDELINES

- Speech must have an introduction, body, and conclusion (see outline)
- Speak from brief notes - not a manuscript. Eye contact with audience is vital.
- Practice your speech at least 5-7 times in front of a mirror or recording device before your date. You should know your time and get a feeling for the duration of the speech. Time and eye contact are very important for this assignment. Review your first taped speech to improve on identified areas.

SPEECH DAY GUIDELINES

- Wear clothing appropriate for your audience and occasion. You must stand.
- Turn in a typed outline with the items in the sample outline. You will lose points if any items are missing. Follow the guidelines provided in the sample outline.

SAMPLE RESPONSE...

Hello, my name is Richard and I would sum myself as saying that I am a hard-working, conscientious and loyal team member who is can be relied upon to work to a very high standard for my employer.

Since leaving college with three A Levels I have been fully committed to ongoing personal and professional development. For example, whilst preparing for this job interview I wanted to learn more about customer service from a resolution aspect, and as such, I embarked on a distance learning course that has resulted in me receiving an NVQ Level 4.

I now feel fully capable of being able to manage and resolve challenging issues raised by customers, something which I realise is pivotal to the role I am applying for.

Our services are presented in All interviews start with the same question: the question seems easy on paper, of course. After all, we're always talking about ourselves, but when you think about it, it's a very open question, do you pass through everything in your resume? Or do you introduce yourself more as a person than a professional? Worried and unsure of how to answer? Relax, you're not the only one! Most people struggle with this question. Here's some good news, though: there's a very easy way to answer the dreaded interview question. Want to learn how? Why do interviewers ask this question? How to answer tell me about yourself with a simple formula 4 essential tips to keep in mind when answering 3 sample responses for professionals, students, and prospective students Let's take it one step at a time To better answer the question, you first need to understand why they ask it in the first place. Hint: the interviewer isn't looking for your life story, or what you had for dinner last night. Rather, the question is a way for them to ease into the current interview and get a general idea of what you're all about. It acts as an introduction and depending on how you answer, it's going to help the interviewer decide what to do next? Why are you interested in the position? Keeping these tips in mind, here's a good answer to "elect about yourself" would be: "Sure, then, my name is Joe and I am Twenty-seven years old. For the last 5 years, I have been working as a business analyst for company X and Yi we have some background in data analysis, with a degree from xy university. What really got me in the field, however, is the estigio I did at the company Z. In my entire career, I noticed that I have always been good with number and dealing with data. For example, when I was working at Company X, I read a project to migrate all the operating data to a new data warehousing system to reduce costs. The new solution was a much better fit for our businesses, which eventually led to savings of up to $200,000 annually. I hope to expand my experience in different industries. Particularly Fintech, and why am I interested in your company? Here is what did right: the answer

© adapted. Joe doesn't walk away, he talks about his experience as a business analyst, and his past achievements in working with data. The response © based on experiences and performance. Joe talks about his experience working as a business analyst, and covers some of his key achievements. The answer is © structured right -- past, future. Sounds simple enough, right? Impressive! Now that covered the basics on how to answer it tell me about yourself, we are going to cover several essential tips that can help you stand out even more. So, let's get started. When answering, try to keep it under 1-2 minutes, at most. No, the HR manager doesn't want to know your entire life story. They don't care about which kindergarten you went to, how your first internship went, or what you studied in high school. You want to stick to your main selling points that are relevant for the job. Pro tip: If you can see that the interviewer is getting distracted, you should take that as a sign that it might be time to wrap up. Here's how you WOULDNT answer this interview question...Well, I've always been interested in tech. But it all probably started when I was a kid, and at the age of 9 I first got my computer. I always loved playing around with code and learning new things. Since then, I have started learning more about the subject and decided to graduate in IT at X University, where I learned how to do it. It is obligatory to hear "do me" in almost every interview, so all you have to do is practice your response a little! Of course, it may seem the safest option, but if you end up forgetting something in the interview, you can spoil your entire response. Instead, come with a general idea of what you will talk about, memorize the structure, and just help the rest in the interview. Or, know him Your interviewer. It is important to keep in mind who you are talking to. HR? Business manager? The hiring manager? CTO? CMO? CEO?may be thinking, why does this matter? Well, the point is that each of these people expects a different answer. Let's say you're a software engineer, and you're being interviewed by the HR if you start to continue and about how much you love coding in the assembly, you practically lost them. see, the hr manager knows nothing about encoding u assemblies. they are expecting a more generic response about you, your career and reasons to apply for the company. in the other hand, if you are being interviewed by cto u by the hiring manager, you can geek whatever you want, with a good response to "Contact me about yourself" should consist of: work - this should represent about 80% of your response. Focus on your previous experience and achievements here. Academic - 10-15% of your response should then be about your academic origin (university, academic achievements, etc.) personal - finally, the last 5-10% should be about you as a person, while still retaining relevant to the company. I wonder, however, that the rule was not situated in stone, if you are a student, for example, your entire response may be about your academic career and personal interests. Need some inspiration? Here are 3 sample answers for: experienced professionalsfresca of teachers and university studentsunionism we will start with: of course, I will be happy in. I am a technology-focused project manager for up to 8 years now. I graduated from the university x, where I made the list of dean, with a large administration of companies and a minor in computer science. After that, I first entered the sector that works as an administrative assistant in the company x. there provided clerical support with interdepartmental communication, helped in the management of schedules and maintained the digital filing system. after I was working as project manager for y company that provided cloud computing solutions for about 6 years. there, I personally managed 5+ software projects teams and ensure that everything went smoothly in terms of business goals, deadlines, budget and more. In my downtime, I like to read about AI, Tech and Robotics. Since you guys make all 3, I thought it's © Name Jane Doe, I am 22 years old and I recently graduated from X University with a B.A. in international business. As a matter of time, I learned a lot of theory on issues such as corporate communications, international economics, corporate governance and more. I was also © part of the student government, and maintained a GPA of 3.6. I've worked my education and am now ready to apply my knowledge in practice. Although I don't have any work experience in real life, I've had a lot of exposure to the business environment. Many of my courses involved working with real companies to solve real problems. Now, I'm looking to leverage everything I've learned in uni and get some hands-on work experience. So, my name is © John, and I'm a © at XYZ School. This year, I managed to maintain a GPA 3.7 while working on some different school projects. I started a Ernest Hemingway Book Club© © 15 active members as of now. And I also © launched a recycling program for the campus, © through which we raise awareness and invite a guest speaker to talk about it. I've usually been oriented towards teamwork and trustable, as I've never missed a deadline. I am © m proud of my ability to preserve and overcome any challenges as they arise. For example, last year, I was having some problems with trigonometry. I realized I needed to devote more time to the subject, so I met with a teacher outside of class and booked two extra hours a day for the subject. Eventually, I ended up with an A on the subject. At X University, I'm planning for any major in English or journalism. I love reading and writing, so I think both programs will be interesting and relevant to my interests. Now, to recap, here are the most important tips on how to respond to tell me about yourself..Structure your in a way that makes sense. Stay in the past-present-future format, and you'© all good! Keep it relevant and brief (1-2 minutes maximum). No © either now, as this is © the start of the interview, expect them to follow up and ask a lot of other questions.
