Penelope y colin bridgerton

Una vez más, 'Bridgerton' logró cautivar al público con su tercera temporada, la cual ya es tendencia en redes sociales.Si aún no terminas de ver el último capítulo de la serie de Netflix, toma en cuenta que a continuación habrá spoilers.'Bridgerton': ¿Cómo termina la primera parte de la temporada 3?Al final del episodio 'Old Friends', Colin se da cuenta de que realmente le gusta Penélope y decide asistir al baile donde Lord Debling iba a proponerle matrimonio oficialmente, oferta que Penélope pensaba aceptar con gusto. Sin embargo, Colin le pide que no se case con él, ya que no sería bueno para ella.Lord Debling se da cuenta de que Penélope siente algo por Colin, así que se retira del evento, dando a entender que ya no tiene intenciones de casarse con ella. Penélope toma su carruaje para irse a casa después de pelear con Colin y él sube con ella para confesarle sus sentimientos y compartir un momento íntimo.Cuando llegan a la casa del joven Bridgerton, le pide a Penélope que lo acompañe y, aunque ella no está segura de hacerlo, la convence al expresarle sus deseos de que sean esposos. Así termina esta primera parte de 'Bridgerton 3' según Netflix. En los libros, el drama continúa después de esto.El texto 'Seduciendo a Mr. Bridgerton' explica que Lady Danbury anuncia que dará una recompensa a quien descubra la identidad de Lady Whistledown, y Cressida Cowper asegura que es ella porque quiere el dinero, ya que para este punto de la historia es una viuda pobre.El romance de Colin y Penélope en 'Bridgerton': Detalles del final, según los librosPoco después, el mismo Colin descubre que Penélope es Lady Whistledown. Le pide que no revele la verdad para que no sea excluida de la alta sociedad, pero ella se rehúsa, pues no desea darle el mérito a Cressida. Aunque el secreto sale a la luz y casi rompe la relación de ambos, terminan comprometándose debido a su fuerte amor.Con el tiempo, Cressida se percata de la verdadera identidad de Lady Whistledown y chantajea a Penélope, pidiéndole todo el dinero que ganó con el panfeto a cambio de mantener el secreto. Sin embargo, en un baile organizado por Daphne y el duque, Colin revela que Penélope era quien escribía los chismes bajo el conocido pseudónimo, lo cual pone fin al drama.Así, Penélope deja de escribir los chismes de la alta sociedad y se casa con Colin. Años más tarde, ambos dan la bienvenida a sus hijos Agatha, Tomas, Jane y George, logrando su "felicis por siempre".A pesar de que Julia Quinn narró así la historia de estos enamorados, es muy probable que Netflix haga algunos cambios, aunque se desconoce por ahora qué tan grandes o pequeños serán y cómo afectarán la trama original.¿Tú qué piensas al respecto? Dearest gentle reader, get your ballgowns and and afternoon tea ready because the final part of Bridgerton season three has finally arrived to Netflix and we’ve explained the regal ending to the period drama.The second part of the third season dropped on 13th June, and sees the relationship between Colin Bridgerton and Penelope Featherington take centre stage. But, does Colin find out Penelope is Lady Whistledown and do they end up getting married?Get ready for some Regency-era gossip, drama and debauchery, because here is the ending to Bridgerton season three part two explained. Thank us later, Bridgerton fans!Jump to:The day after her wedding to Colin, Penelope receives a visit from Cressida Cowper who discovers from the printers that Penelope is Lady Whistledown, so she blackmails her for money and tells Penelope’s mother.Penelope then tells Eloise and Colin and offers to pay the sum from her money made from selling the gossip column, but Colin orders that Penelope shouldn’t pay Cressida a penny and decides to pay her a visit.Here, Colin tells Cressida that he relates to her loneliness as does Penelope, and pleads with her to forgive Penelope. But, she disagrees, asks for even more money plus a column to restore her reputation.Netflix On Francesca and John’s wedding day, Lady Featherington receives a visit from the solicitor who threatens to expose her for using the money Jack Featherington stole from the ‘ton.Meanwhile, Lady Danbury suggests Violet should explore her connection with Lord Marcus Anderson and says she does not need her permission, just like she didn’t ask for permission when she and Violet’s father had a relationship years prior.While getting ready, Francesca discusses moving to Scotland with her mother and insists she will come back to visit. Then, Violet says she now understands the calmer nature of her relationship with John and the couple marry in a small ceremony at home.Liam Daniel/NetflixDavid M. Benett/Getty ImagesNetflixAfter Benedict, Tilley and Suarez sleep together, Tilley tells Benedict that she wants a more serious relationship with him, but he doesn’t agree. He says that he wants to be free for longer, and they end their relationship.As for Cressida, she is still sent away to live with her aunt after Penelope decides not to pay the blackmail money or release a new issue.At the Featherington ball, Violet and Lord Marcus dance together and soon, Queen Charlotte arrives and says she received a letter from Lady Whistledown asking for mercy.Then, Penelope takes the centre of the ballroom where she admits she to the ‘ton that she is Lady Whistledown and why she wrote the gossip paper.She then tells the Queen she will be more careful with her writing and asks to continue writing her paper, to which the Queen agrees. “What is life without a little gossip?” she says, before leaving and the ball continues.Lady Danbury then tells Penelope she knew she was Lady Whistledown, and Penelope tells her mother that they can say to the solicitor their money was from her gossip column.LIAM DANIEL/NETFLIXNetflixColin tells Penelope that she will understand if he wants to annul their marriage, but he tells her that he accepts her for who she is, was regrettably jealous of her success and they tell each other they love each other. We’re not crying, you are!Eloise asks Francesca and John if she can go to Scotland with them to have a break from London and the ‘ton, and they agree. Then, Francesca meets John’s cousin, Michaela Stirling, and is lost for words. If you’ve read the books, you know!As Eloise and Francesca leave for Scotland, they say goodbye to Benedict, Penelope and the rest of their family. Then, in a flash forward, we see Colin and Penelope have had a baby, as have Philippa, Felicity and their husbands.Then, an issue of Lady Whistledown arrives, but we see Penelope has decided to drop the pseudonym and signs the issue as Penelope Bridgerton. The end!NetflixBridgerton is streaming on Netflix now.The first clip of Bridgerton season 4 is here What’s the situ with Lady Danbury and her brother? ‘Bridgerton’ stars dish on Colin and Penelope’s season 3 romance‘Bridgerton’ stars Nicola Coughlan and Claudia Jessie chat with USA TODAY’s Ralphe Aversa about a major moment in the first part of season 3.Spoiler alert! The following contains details from the Season 3 season of ‘Bridgerton.”Dearest Gentle Reader,I must confess, I expected more from this season. Perhaps I was spoiled by “Queen Charlotte” or the previous diamonds on Netflix’s “Bridgerton” series. While this season’s diamond may have been the lovely, quiet-seeking Francesca Bridgerton, it was truly Penelope Featherington’s time to shine. And she did, brightly. Penelope (Nicola Coughlan) stepped out of the shadows, stood up for herself and stood out from the noble throng, and I’m here for it. She also finally caught the eye of her long-time crush and good friend, Colin Bridgerton (Luke Newton), among other eligible bachelors. Penelope may have forgiven Colin for the awful things he said about her, but I have not. I watched with one eyebrow raised, wondering when he would prove himself worthy of such a hidden gem – or even just more interesting than traveler and apparent carouser and alleged writer – and continuing to be more disappointed than the queen (Golda Rosheuvel). I wish to be entertained, after all. Penelope’s not wrong when she confessed to him that she said awful things about him because she was hurt and has been wondering where the old Colin went. Me, too, sis. The Colin we saw in the first season when he courted Marina (Ruby Barker) was bold and funny and kind and supportive. In the second season, he even sought her out to be sure she was happy. Where is this same energy for beautiful Pen?But when he defended her to her vicious mama (Polly Walker) and said all the ways he respected her, was attracted to her and loved her, I finally melted a little. That’s a solid start, Mr. Bridgerton. Now, dear reader, I must apologize for possibly coming across horny on main, but I also wanted more moments of intimacy between Colin and Penelope. The plot is nice, but more so is the spice. More: Nicola Coughlan on what makes that ‘Bridgerton’ carriage scene special: ‘It’s sexy”Bridgerton” has not been shy with scenes of sexy escapades, in particular those of the season’s central couples. And not just the main, um, event — you know, the lustful thrusting and such — but the charged looks, the soft touches, the longing, the pretty words and soulful declarations. We saw more of the day-to-day love and intimacy of his brother Anthony Bridgerton (Jonathan Bailey) and his new wife, Kate (Simone Ashley). I might even be a touch hypocritical because during one scene between them, I muttered “get off of her” as Anthony nearly smothered her with affection and barely let her talk to other people during a party.More: Bridgerton Season 3 vs. the books: Differences in Colin and Penelope’s love storyThere were a lot of plot points and engagements to attend to this season, and I appreciate the foundational work setting up future seasons (looking forward to more Benedict, played by Luke Thompson, and Francesca, played by Hannah Dodd, and seeing them explore their sexuality). Lady Danbury (Adjoa Andoh) would applaud the strategy of keeping things tantalizing.And yet, amidst the something something Whistledown, something something the ton, could there have been more kisses? More sweet moments of what grew out of their many years of friendship? Did I miss an episode where more of this occurred?I wanted to see Colin worship Penelope, fight even more for her, prove he loved both her mind and her body instead of letting her do most of the work and then simply accepting it. I await next season with bated breath. Bridgerton fans were thrilled when the new first-look snaps were revealed over the weekend for season four, which showed Nicola Coughlan and Luke Newton as Penelope Featherington and Colin Bridgerton respectively. The upcoming instalment will be based on their romance, but what actually happens? Here’s what we know, according to the books... In the fourth book in the Bridgerton series by Julia Quinn, Penelope takes centre stage. While dealing with the possibility of her identity as Lady Whistledown being discovered, Penelope is devastated when her longstanding crush Colin Bridgerton doesn’t return her feelings after overhearing him claim that he will never court her. WATCH: First look at Luke and Nicola in season 3 Giving up on finding love, Penelope begins to accept her status as a spinster, enjoying the perks that come with the situation, including her mother giving up on making her wear shades that don’t suit her and being able to eat the delicious food available at the balls. The book reads: “Penelope’s mother refused to allow Penelope to choose her own clothing, and when she wasn’t in the requisite white that most young ladies wore (and which of course didn’t flatter her complexion one bit), she was forced to wear yellow and red and orange, all of which made her look perfectly wretched.” © NetflixColin Bridgerton in Bridgerton season 3 However, since her mother had given up on trying to find her a husband, Penelope is able to choose gowns that suit her and grows in confidence as a result, particularly when she starts getting closer to Colin.MORE: Queen Charlotte: every mention of Bridgerton season 3 in spin-off showShe discovers how much Colin struggles with being the third son, and that he is a passionate writer and secret wants to do it as a career - and as the pair grow closer, Colin discovers more about Penelope’s secret identity. © NetflixNicola as Penelope Featherington © NetflixSeason 3 is loosely based on the book ‘Romancing Mister Bridgerton’ The novel’s synopsis reads: “Colin Bridgerton is tired of being thought nothing but an empty-headed charmer, tired of everyone’s preoccupation with the notorious gossip columnist Lady Whistledown, who can’t seem to publish an edition without mentioning him in the first paragraph. “But when Colin returns to London from a trip abroad he discovers nothing in his life is quite the same - especially Penelope Featherington! The girl haunting his dreams. But when he discovers that Penelope has secrets of her own, this elusive bachelor must decide...is she his biggest threat - or his promise of a happy ending?” © NetflixNicola Coughlan is returning as Penelope The plot appears to differ slightly from the TV show, as in the novel, Penelope immediately confronts Colin after overhearing his comments about marriage and decidedly forgives him, while in the show it looks like he will have to try harder to make amends by helping her find a husband The Netflix summary reads: “Eager to win back her friendship, Colin offers to mentor Penelope in the ways of confidence to help her find a husband this season. But when his lessons start working a little too well, Colin must grapple with whether his feelings for Penelope are truly just friendly.” We can’t wait to see how the show interprets the novel! Polin forever! Penelope Featherington (Nicola Coughlan) and Colin Bridgerton’s (Luke Newton) love story got the spotlight in Bridgerton Season 3, but the show has been building to this relationship since the first season. Penelope and Colin’s romance has been the ultimate slow burn, with the most satisfying payoff. Their friendship endured hurdles, some more heartbreaking than others (see below), before deepening into a romantic relationship. Season 3, based on Julia Quinn’s Romancing Mister Bridgerton, gave Polin fans the scenes we’d been craving. From their first kiss to their steamy carriage moment to their wedding, Penelope and Colin enchanted us with their love story. In honor of Penelope and Colin getting their happy ending, scroll down to get a full relationship timeline of Polin’s relationship from Season 1 to now. Penelope Featherington and Colin Bridgerton’s relationship timeline on ‘Bridgerton.’ (TV Insider) Penelope and Colin have always been in each other’s orbits. From the very first episode of Bridgerton, it was clear that Penelope only had eyes for Colin. In the series premiere, “Diamond of the First Water,” Penelope and Colin cross paths during outdoor ball at Vauxhall Gardens. When the cruel Cressida (Jessica Madsen) deliberately spills her drink on Penelope’s dress, Colin sticks it to the Cowper girl and asks Penelope to dance. A gleeful Penelope joins Colin on the dance floor in their first dance of the series. In the first season, Marina Thompson (Ruby Barker), a distant Featherington cousin, comes to town to make her debut. Marina believes her lover, George Crane, has abandoned her, and she quickly realizes she’s pregnant. She begins to search for a husband and sets her sights on Colin, much to Penelope’s dismay. Colin does propose to Marina, but he wants a long engagement, which thwarts her plan to cover up her pregnancy. When Penelope voices her concern over Colin getting wrapped up in Marina’s pregnancy plot, Marina twists the knife. “Your love is an unrequited fantasy,” Marina tells Penelope. So what does Penelope do? She outs Marina’s pregnancy in her next Lady Whistledown column. A hurt and embarrassed Colin calls off his engagement to Marina soon after her baby news is exposed. Following the Marina drama, Colin decides he needs a reprieve from the ton gossip. Penelope’s ready to admit her feelings to Colin, but he reveals his big news first: he’s leaving town. He’s heading out on his tour, which he says Penelope inspired him to do. Penelope doesn’t profess her love then, and she quickly runs away before she sheds any tears. Colin returns from his travels at the beginning of Season 2, and we learn that he and Penelope corresponded frequently while he was away. A miscommunication leads Penelope to believe that Colin met a young lady during his travels. Colin later explains himself. “Your letters were so encouraging. I thought, if Penelope can see me this way, then surely I can too,” he says, before adding that he finally met his true self on this trip. He also reveals that he’s sworn off women for the time being. When Penelope asks what that means for her, Colin replies, “You are Pen. You do not count. You are my friend.” Ouch. This is Colin Bridgerton’s lowest point. Colin has a total “bro” moment when his male acquaintances ask if he’s courting Penelope after seeing them dance together. “Are you mad? I would never dream of courting Penelope Featherington,” he says. Unfortunately, Penelope is eavesdropping from a distance and hears Colin’s painful words. Our beloved Pen runs away in tears. (Colin, you were raised better than this!) In the Season 3 premiere, Colin agrees to help Penelope find a husband. She’s ready to put her wallflower days behind her. When everyone and their mother finds out about their little deal, courtesier of Eloise (Claudia Jessie), Penelope is humiliated. Colin rushes to her house to call on Penelope and apologize for what happened. Out of the blue, Penelope asks Colin to kiss her because she’s never been kissed. “I do not wish to die without ever having been kissed,” she tells him. What starts out as a simple, chaste kiss turns into a passionate lip lock. It’s the kisses that changes everything for Polin! Penelope does find an eligible suitor in the sweet, nature-loving Lord Debling (Sam Phillips). He and Penelope take an interest in each other right away. Lord Debling is ready to pop the question to Penelope when he figures out Penelope’s true feelings for Colin. After Lord Debling officially ends their courtship, Penelope heads home in her carriage. Colin runs after her and begs to join her. Penelope calls him out for ruining her relationship with Lord Debling. Colin confesses that he does have romantic feelings for Penelope. Finally on the same page, Colin and Penelope have a sensual and downright hot carriage hookup, one of the most highly-anticipated moments from Romancing Mister Bridgerton—and it does not disappoint. After the spell is broken on their carriage tryst, Colin shocks Penelope once again. “For God’s sake, Penelope Featherington. Are you going to marry me or not?” he says to her. Penelope is too stunned to speak! Polin fans didn’t just get one sexy love-making scene in Season 2. We get two. Penelope and Colin’s mirror moment, which leads to their first time, is by far one of the sexiest Bridgerton moments. Standing in front of a mirror, Colin showers Penelope with praise before undressing her in what Coughlan calls “the most beautiful profession of love.” They consummate their relationship on a chaise lounge in their new home. When Cressida tries to take credit for Lady Whistledown to get a reward, Penelope just can’t let it go. She writes a last-minute column and races to the printer, but Colin follows her. He finally discovers that she’s Lady Whistledown in Episode 6’s “Romancing Mister Bridgerton.” The fallout of Colin’s discovery happens in the following episode, “Joining of Hands.” Colin is beyond shocked by the truth and says he’ll never forgive Penelope for keeping such a secret. Colin and Penelope are on the outs for a bit, but this secret is not enough to break them up. Say hello to the new Mr. and Mrs. Bridgerton! Colin and Penelope’s whirlwind romance builds to a gorgeous wedding in Season 3, Episode 7. Penelope walks down the aisle in a pale pink wedding gown and says “I do” to the man she’s always (and only ever) loved. Polin’s wedding day isn’t all sunshine and roses, though. The Lady Whistledown bombshell is still looming over them, with Penelope refusing to give up her title. Penelope steps into the light and reveals herself as Lady Whistledown at her sisters’ ball. With the truth finally out, Colin and Penelope officially reconcile. “I have been envious of you,” Colin says. “Of your bravery. And now I simply cannot believe that a woman with such bravery loves me.” The Season 3 finale flashes forward several months. Penelope and Colin have a son, making their little one the next Lord Featherington. A happily ever after indeed! Bridgerton season 3 is on its way, hitting Netflix on May 16! Since this season will center on Penelope Featherington (Nicola Coughlan) and Colin Bridgerton (Luke Newton), you may need a refresher course on their complicated relationship. Here are the highlights! Penelope and Colin’s relationship goes all the way back to Bridgerton season 1. When we first meet Penelope, she’s a quiet wallflower and the black sheep of her family. She has no prospects for marriage. She doesn’t have a Ton-approved body type. Her sisters pick on her and her mother ignores her. She finds solace in her friendship with Eloise Bridgerton (Claudia Jesse), but in terms of romance, she’s heartsick for Colin. The problem? Colin only sees her as a friend. In fact, the idea that they could be something more doesn’t seem to ever occur to him, even in the midst of all the proposals and weddings of the London social season. In season 1, Colin even gets engaged to another woman, Marina (Ruby Barker), before finding out that Marina is pregnant by another man. By the end of season 2, Colin’s obliviousness gets downright hurtful. Penelope overhears him talking about marriage prospects to some of his friends, and he tells them he would never consider courting Penelope. Penelope is devastated. Penelope also has a secret: she’s Lady Whistledown, the anonymous author of a broadside that reports on all the gossip and scandals of the Ton. However, the two person who know Penelope’s secret so far are Eloise and Madame Delacroix, the modiste who makes dresses for the wealthy women of the Ton. Could Colin be the next to find out? Each season of Bridgerton focuses on one Bridgerton sibling’s romance. This season, it’s Colin’s turn. The season 3 trailer makes it clear, though, that the story will about Penelope as much as, if not more, than it is about Colin. In the trailer, Penelope announces her intention to find a husband. She then gows through a glow-up, abandoning the usual garish Featherington garb in favor of a darker, more sophisticated look. She’s ready to put herself out there, even if Colin can’t see how smart and gorgeous she is. Will Colin finally figure it out? He’d better. (featured image: Netflix)Have a tip we should know?
