Outsourced Manufacturing Challenges

Less Visibility, Less Control, Conflicting Information

- ATP based on supplier capacity and availability of optional components
- Communicating configuration changes to multiple supplier tiers
- Enforcing compliance and methodology
- Enforcing product quality standards
- Capturing the "as built" genealogy and product traceability information
- Tracking and reporting WIP and order status to customers
- Managing and monitoring inventory levels (WIP, etc)
- Communicating shipping instructions, authorizations, and notifications
- Tracking in-transit shipments from supplier to customer

All the "Headaches" of In-House Manufacturing are Amplified

Basic HTML Template Code FOR FREE!

 Example * // Indented two spaces. The request is made to the server. When using event handlers to listen for browser events it's a common requirement to want to cancel the default browser action. This makes it easier to create strings containing HTML. // BAD: contrived example. Most text editors can also be configured to read from this file. Nearly all requests will go through the following states. Here's a possible example for submitting a search form using jQuery. * client.getTemplate('index.html', {limit: 1}, function (html) { * module.el.html(html); * });  Returns describes what the object returns. Generally we try and have the core functionality of all libraries and modules unit tested. Licensed under Creative Commons Attribution ShareAlike (Unported) v3.0 License. User clicks button. function lowercaseNames(names) { var names = []; for (var index = 0, length = names.length; index < length; index += 1) { var name = names[index]; names.push(name.toLowerCase()); } var sorted = names.sort(); return sorted; } // GOOD: function lowercaseNames(names) { var names = []; for (var index = 0, length = names.length; index < length; index += 1) { name = names[index]; names.push(name.toLowerCase()); } sorted = names.sort(); return sorted; } // ALL PROPERTIES, FUNCTIONS AND METHODS MUST USE lowercase camelCase: var myUsername = 'bill'; var methods = { getSomething: function () { } }; Constructor functions must use uppercase CamelCase: function DatasetSearchView() { } Constants must be uppercase with spaces delimited by underscores: var env = { PRODUCTION: 'production', DEVELOPMENT: 'development', TESTING: 'testing' }; Event handlers and callback functions should be prefixed with "on". function onDownloadClick(event) { jQuery('download').click(onDownloadClick); } Boolean variables or methods returning boolean values should prefix the variable name with "is": function isAdmin() { var canEdit = isUser() && isAdmin(); } Note Alternatives are "has", "can" and "should" if they make more sense Private methods should be prefixed with an underscore: View.extend({ "click": "onClick", "onClick": function (event) { } }); Functions should be declared as named functions rather than assigning an anonymous function to a variable. A loading indicator is displayed (add class.loading to button). // GOOD: function getName() { } // BAD: var getName = function () { } Named functions are generally easier to debug as they appear named in the debugger. * Example * client.getTemplate('index.html', {limit: 1}, function (html) { * module.el.html(html); * });  Returns a jqXHR promise object that can be used to attach callbacks. function getUrl(full) { var url = '/styleguide/javascript/'; if (full) { url = ' + url; } return url; } // GOOD: function getUrl(full) { var url = '/styleguide/javascript/'; if (full) { url = ' + url; } return url; } // Note See section 2.D.1.1 of idiomatic for more examples of this syntax. jQuery('').appendTo('body'); Object properties need not be quoted unless required by the interpreter. For example an analytics click handler attached to the element. This prevents other handlers listening for the same event. Small templates that will not require customisation by the instance can be placed inline. Support the CKAN Association. This can be installed using npm (which is bundled with node) by running: Each project should include a .jshint.json file with appropriate configuration options for the tool. // GOOD: var good = 'string'; var alsoGood = 'another'; // GOOD: var good = 'string'; var okay = ['hmm', 'not', 'great']; // BAD: var good = 'string'; iffy = ['hmm', 'not', 'great']; Declare variables at the top of the function in which they are first used. Modules get access to this functionality via the sandbox.client object: initialize: function () { var el = this.el; this.sandbox.client.getTemplate('dataset.html', function (html) { el.html(html); }); } The primary benefits of this is that the localisation can be done by the server and it keeps the JavaScript modules free from large strings. CKAN See also String internationalization How to mark strings for translation. Also for API's and third party libraries, providing links to external documentation is encouraged. This should be done by calling the event.preventDefault() method: jQuery('button').click(function (event) { event.preventDefault(); }); It is also possible to return false from the callback function. var object = { name: 'bill', class: 'user-name' }; One var statement must be used per variable assignment. All forms should work without JavaScript enabled. On error a message is displayed to the user if there is no other way to resolve the issue. Unlike in idiomatic whitespace must not be used inside parentheses and their Contents. Coding style must follow the idiomatic.js style but with the following exceptions. We use the BDD interface (describe(), it() etc.). These must be declared at the top of the function in which they are being used. // For testing we use Cypress. This will * receive the HTML string as the first argument. * * param1 - The method params, one per line (default: null) * param2 - A default can be provided in brackets at the end. The loading indicator is removed. Note Calls to the CKAN API should be done through the CKAN client. Source - Issues - Mailing List - Twitter @CKANProject Related Projects: DataCatalogs.org - OpenSpending.org - Open Data Handbook Sphinx theme provided by Read the Docs The formatting is as follows: /* My method description. The button is re-enabled. All JavaScript documents must use two spaces for indentation. On success the interface is updated. * error - An optional error callback to be called if the request fails. It's then not part of the HTML document and can submit any data format it pleases. * * filename - The filename of the template to load. event.preventDefault(); button.prop('disabled', true).addClass('loading'); jQuery.ajax({ type: 'this.method', success: function (results) { updatePageWithResults(results); }, error: function () { showSearchError('Sorry we were unable to complete this search'); }, complete: function () { button.prop('disabled', false).removeClass('loading'); } }); This covers possible issues that might arise from submitting the form as well as providing the user with adequate feedback that the page is doing something. Two spaces must be used for indentation at all times. Disabling the button prevents the form being submitted twice and the error feedback should hopefully offer a solution for the error that occurred. For documentation we use a simple markup format to document all methods. The one exception to this rule is if a form or button is injected with JavaScript after the page has loaded. The server should check for the X-Requested-With: XMLHttpRequest header to determine if the request is an ajax one. * * Optional success and error callbacks can be provided or these can * be attached using the returns jQuery promise object. Ajax requests can be used to improve the experience of submitting forms and other actions that require server interactions. This is contrary to the OKFN Coding Standards but matches what's in use in the current code base. * * 2009-2018 Open Knowledge Foundation and contributors. Single quotes should be used everywhere unless writing JSON or the string contains them. Template * variables can be passed through the API using the params object. Also jQuery (1.7+) now provides the .on() and .off() methods as alternatives to .bind(), .unbind(), .delegate() and .undelegate() and they should be preferred for all tasks. // BAD: Too much whitespace. If a variable is not assigned a value until later in the function then it okay to define more than one per statement. The documentation should provide enough information to show the reader what the method does, arguments it accepts and a general example of usage. * success - An optional success callback to be called on load. Should describe what the method does and where * it should be used. JavaScript intercepts the click and disables the button (add disabled attr). This avoids issues with variable hoisting. // For example: /* Loads an HTML template from the CKAN snippet API endpoint. All JavaScript should pass JSHint before being committed. Avoid doing this as it also calls the event.stopPropagation() method which prevents the event from bubbling up the DOM tree. [jQuery('#search-form').submit(function (event) { var form = $(this); var button = $('[type=submit]', form); // Prevent the browser submitting the form. If you are including them inline this can be done with jQuery('jQuery(template).find('span').text('This is my text string')). Larger templates can be loaded in using the CKAN snippet API. If so it can return an appropriate format, otherwise it should issue a 303 redirect. This means that they must submit application/x-www-form-urlencoded data to the server and receive an appropriate response. * params - An optional object containing key/value arguments to be * passed into the template. Tests are run from the cypress directory. Should give a common example of use. If you need to create multi-line templates use an array rather than escaping newlines within a string: var template = [' ', ' ', ' '].join(''); Always localise text strings within your template.
