The smallest countries measure just a couple square miles. The biggest are absolutely massive. Here are the world's largest countries, listed in order of total area. You might also be interested in our list of the most populous countries (which is another metric people often mean by "largest countries").RankCountryArea in sq. km1.Russia17,098,242.2Canada9,984,670.3Algeria2,381,741The largest by continentThis is a bit of a tricky category, since the absolute largest country, Russia, straddles two continents (or not, depending on which model of the continents you follow). "Asian" Russia would still be the largest country in Asia. Greenland is also questionable, since it's technically governed by Iceland. Using the Seven Continents model popular in the U.S., the largest countries entirely within each continent are listed here below: Africa: Algeria, the Republic of Congo, Sudan, Libya, Chad, Niger, Angola, Mali, South Africa, and Ethiopia Asia: China, India, Kazakhstan, Saudi Arabia, Indonesia Iran, Mongolia, Pakistan, Afghanistan, and Yemen Europe: Turkey, France, Ukraine, Spain, Sweden, Germany, Finland, Norway, Poland, and Italy North America: Canada, the United States, Greenland*, Mexico, Nicaragua, Honduras, Cuba, Guatemala, Panama, and Costa Rica Oceania: Australia, Papua New Guinea, and New Zealand South America: Brazil, Argentina, Peru, Colombia, Bolivia, Venezuela, Chile, Paraguay, Guyana and Uruguay (And then Antarctica has no countries. Were it a country, it would be the second largest after Russia) How we measure size A country's total area includes its landmass and a region of sea extending out to (or beyond) its continental shelf. Different countries measure their oceanic area differently, which can lead to some flexibility in the rankings. We've gone with the official areas listed in the CIA World Factbook, but some might argue that we should only measure a country's land area. In that case, the rankings would change slightly. China would be the second largest country, then the U.S. then Canada. How we display size Many people remember the episode of the West Wing where they discuss map projections. It is true that the commonly used Mercator projection gives a false impression of how big different countries are; to fit a 3D globe onto a flat plane, areas near the poles are stretched out and made bigger. That said, Russia, Canada, and the United States are all very big in reality. These three have held the top three spots, in that order, since the United States incorporated Alaska in the 1900s. Recent changes in the world's borders have been fairly fixed for the past decades. Russia has arguably gained area (if one includes Crimea in the country). Crimea would add another 27,000 square kilometers to Russia's already bogging size. NOTE: Country rankings aren't definitive; instead they provide an approximate comparison. Country data vary enormously depending on the sources, and there is an absence of reliable data on some countries. Source: The World Factbook and the U.S. Census Bureau. International Database. The top 10 largest countries occupy nearly half of the world's dry land. Russia (11%) China (6.3%) United States (6.1%) Canada [Note 1] (6.1%) Brazil (5.6%) Australia (5.2%) India (2.0%) Argentina (1.8%) Kazakhstan (1.8%) Algeria (1.6%) Other (52.5%) This is a list of the world's countries and their dependent territories by land, water and total area, ranked by total area. Entries in this list include, but are not limited to, those in the ISO 3166-1 standard, which includes sovereign states and dependent territories. All 193 member states of the United Nations plus the two observer states are given a rank number. Largely unrecognised states not in ISO 3166-1 are included in the list in ranked order. The areas of such largely unrecognised states are in most cases also included in the areas of the more widely recognised states that claim the same territory; see the notes in the "notes" column for clarification. Not included in the list are individual country claims to parts of the continent of Antarctica or entities such as the European Union [Note 2] that have some degree of sovereignty but do not consider themselves to be sovereign countries or dependent territories. This list includes three measurements of area: Total area: the sum of land and water areas within international boundaries and coastlines. Land area: the aggregate of all land within international boundaries and coastlines, excluding water area. Water area: the sum of the surface areas of all inland water bodies (lakes, reservoirs, and rivers) within international boundaries and coastlines.[2] Coastal internal waters may be included. Territorial seas are not included unless otherwise noted. Contiguous zones and exclusive economic zones are not included. Data is taken from the United Nations Statistics Division unless otherwise noted.[3] Map World area, except Antarctica, colour-coded by areas of countries in square kilometres.
