FIBA, the world governing body for basketball, serves a global community of over a billion people. Our strategy is to develop, grow, and promote basketball in order to unite the global basketball community. The core principles and structures established at FIBA's founding in 1932 remain, adapting to the evolving global basketball, sporting, and political landscape. Our global headquarters are based in Mies, Switzerland overlooking Lake Geneva and the Alps. FIBA's social and legacy arm, focusing on the role of basketball in society while preserving and promoting its values and cultural heritage. The FMMS oversees the planning, execution, and promotion of all media and marketing initiatives of FIBA. FIBA's country offices work under its direction to ensure the successful execution of basketball development initiatives in targeted regions. FIBA has established a collaborative relationship with recognized organizations, to promote and develop the sport globally. This partnership ensures that all forms of basketball, including adaptive versions, receive support, resources, and recognition within the broader framework of FIBA's mission. The FIBA Activity Report outlines two years of global basketball development, governance, and competitions. Copyright FIBA. All rights reserved. A non-profit organization, our mission is to develop, grow and promote the dynamic and exciting sport of basketball by prioritizing excellence, inclusivity, innovation and sustainability. Founded in 1932, FIBA is the only basketball authority recognized by the International Olympic Committee (IOC). We support and empower 212 National Basketball Federations globally from our headquarters in Mies, Switzerland. We also have five Regional Offices worldwide. Organizing international competitions including the flagship FIBA Basketball World Cup, FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup, the Olympic Basketball Tournaments and major FIBA 3x3 events. Establishing the Official Basketball Rules and regulations that govern relationships between different members of the global basketball community. Implementing specifications for basketball equipment and facilities, focusing on innovation and sustainability. Regulating international player transfers. Maintaining ranking systems for national basketball teams based on results, to help determine seedings and invitations for future events. Developing basketball globally by fostering youth and grassroots participation, by providing technical assistance including coaching and officiating clinics, as well as other educational programs. Preserving and promoting basketball's values and cultural heritage. The FIBA Foundation was established in 2008 to build the Patrick Baumann House of Basketball. Since 2016, the Foundation has initiated countless 'Basketball For Good' projects, benefiting over 95,000 people annually in 158 countries. Official Basketball Rules Our founding members in 1932 were Argentina, Czechoslovakia, Greece, Italy, Latvia, Portugal, Romania and Switzerland. At the 1936 Olympics, the founder of basketball James Naismith (1861-1939) was named as FIBA Honorary President. We have organized the FIBA Basketball World Cup since 1950 and the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup since 1953 and these alternate with the Olympics. In 1989, FIBA opened the door to Olympic participation by professionals, including NBA players. The Fdration Internationale de Basketball Amateur became the Fdration Internationale de Basketball, with FIBA retained as its abbreviation. FIBA moved its global headquarters to Munich in 1956 and returned to Geneva in 2002. The FIBA House of Basketball was inaugurated on 18 June 2013. It marked an historic moment and a significant milestone for FIBA. The Patrick Baumann House of Basketball today includes the Naismith Arena, a dedicated 1,000 square metre exhibition and event space for the cultural heritage of basketball. It displays a collection of basketball items, books, and art. It is also home to the FIBA Hall of Fame. FIBA 3x3, the worlds number one urban team sport made its Olympic debut at Tokyo 2020, just over a decade after its first official event at the 2010 Youth Olympic Games.
