Little Red Hen PowerPoint

The PowerPoint can be used as a whole class or group activity to introduce the story to the pupils. Pupils should be encouraged to join in with the repetitive phrases in the story to help reinforce the language and assimilate the sentence structures. Reading aloud will help to develop pupil reading skills and confidence.

Extension

- Pupils can be encouraged to create their own versions of the story. They can change the characters of the story or can change how the characters speak – the cat whispered, the mouse squeaked.

Little Red Hen picture sequencing cards

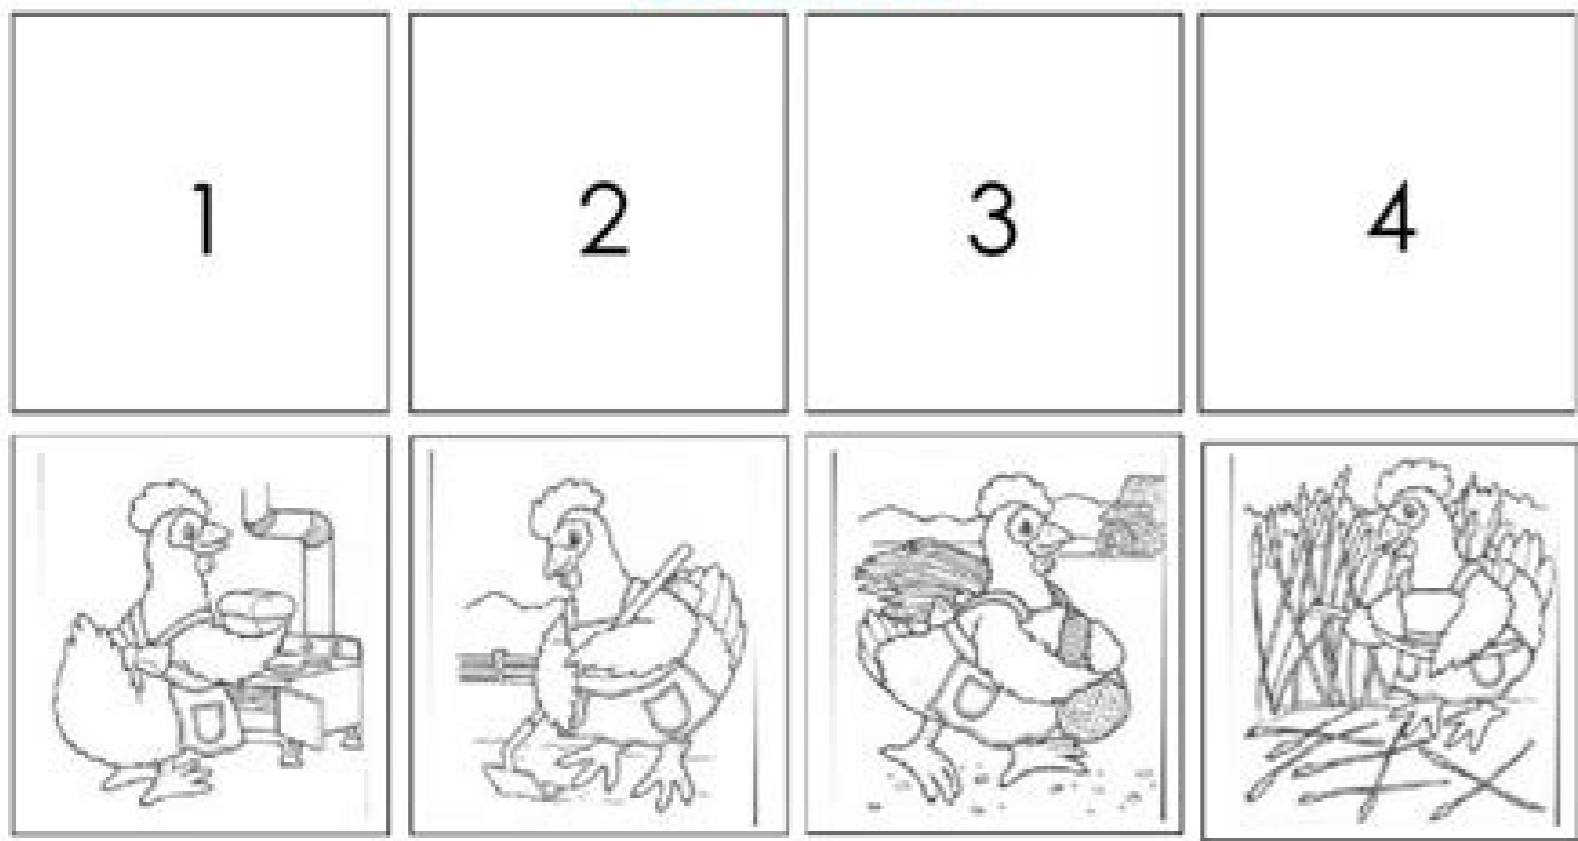

The picture sequencing cards can be used as a paired or small group (5) activity. Put the cards face down. Each pupil takes turns to pick up a card and describe their picture card to the others. Pupils then have to sequence the cards in the correct order and take it in turns to talk about their card in the correct sequence order thus retelling the story. There is a set of numbered pictures which can be used for checking.

Extension

- Put sequence in a different order of events and ask the pupils to talk about their sequence and discuss if it makes logical sense.

"Not I!" said the duck.
 "Not I!" said the goose.
 "Not I!" said the cat.
 "Not I!" said the pig.

"Then I will carry it myself," said the little Red Hen. And she did. She carried the wheat to the mill, and the miller made it into flour.

She worked for Oxford University Press as a freelance author for over 20 years, writing fiction for children and young adults learning english as a foreign language. As well as creating many original stories like Baby Robot and Archie's Sweet Shop, she was also the sole author for the multi award winning series Classic Tales which involved retelling traditional fairy tales for overseas learners of english. This series is still in print, now in a 2nd edition. She also works as a self taught artist, using the name Kisa - creating colourful, imaginative and visionary works of art in top grade oil paints. Her most recent exhibition was at The New Room cafe at John Wesley's Methodist Chapel in Broadmead, Bristol. "Lord of the Meadow is a new fairy story for children everywhere. I decided to illustrate it myself, with a lot of small illustrations, painted, unusually, in oils. It is a lyrical, amusing and uplifting story - all set in an English summer meadow - enjoy!" Exceptionally strong skills training - that's what you get with Family and Friends. How? The clear methodology, with objectives for every lesson, and carefully staged activities support your children's learning. So do the controlled 'Skills Time' programmes in every unit - and their listening, speaking and literacy skills will continually improve. Phonics is straightforward and fun! The progression is specially written for non-native speakers, meaning each sound is taught in a way that's easy to understand. The writing activities are very well structured and train essential sub-skills too, such as punctuation, so children feel ready to do their own personalised writing in the Workbook and worksheets from the Photocopy Masters Book. For fun in class, teach your lessons through a wide range of linked print and digital resources - so they meet the needs of students with different learning styles. Why not try the interactive writing posters or the phonics cards, the chants and drills? With the Student's Site, children can continue learning English at home, and parents can support and reinforce the learning that is taking place at school. The Student's Site includes songs, chants, vocabulary and interactive exercises and can be found here: www.oup.com/elt/familyandfriends Do you need help preparing for tests? There's print-ready practice papers for international exams such as CYLET or you can customise tests to practise a particular language point or to suit mixed ability classes. But it's not only about academic success - Family and Friends develops the whole child too. The values syllabus helps children develop social and emotional skills which guarantee success in the classroom and at home. The story A hen (with three baby chicks) living on a farm finds some wheat and decides to make bread with it. She asks the other farmyard animals to help her plant it, but they refuse. The hen then harvests and mills the wheat into flour before baking it into bread. And at each stage she again asks the animals for help, and they refuse. Finally, with her task complete, the hen asks who will help her eat the bread. This time the animals accept eagerly (all saying, "I will!"). But the hen says that no one (none of her friends) will eat the bread, states that no one helped her with her work, and eats the bread herself (only her and her chicks). Finally, she and her chicks eat all the bread (leaving nothing for the other farm animals). In some books, in the end, the little red hen decides to give her friends another chance. She states that she may be happy to bake enough bread for her, her chicks, and all her friends if her friends help her do the work. Then her friends happily agree with that idea from the little red hen. Background and adaptations The tale is based on a story Dodge's mother often told her. Originally the other animals besides the hen consist of a rat, a cow, a cat, a dog, and a pig.[1] Later adaptations often reduce the number of other animals to three. The story was likely intended as a literature primer for young readers, but departed from highly moralistic, often religious stories written for the same purpose. Adaptations throughout the 1880s incorporated appealing illustrations in order to hold the reader's attention as interest became more relevant to reading lessons. Repetitive vocabulary is still used in adaptations in order to encourage learning for very early readers.[citation needed] A 2006 picture book adaptation of the story titled The Wise Little Hen was produced by Walt Disney Productions in 1934. It is notable for the first appearance of Donald Duck as one of the lazy animals who refuses to help the hen. Revisions Politically themed revisions of the story include a conservative version based on a 1976 monologue from Ronald Reagan. This version features a farmer who claims that the hen is being unfair by refusing to share the bread and forces her to do so, removing the hen's incentive to work and causing poverty to befall the farm.[2] Another version satirizes capitalism by depicting the hen promising the animals slices of bread if they make it, but keeping the largest slice for herself despite not doing any work. A version by Malvina Reynolds adapts the story into a pro-work socialist anthem as the hen retains the fruits of her labor, saying "And that's why they called her Red." [3] An episode of the animated series Super Why! features a revision of the story. In the episode, the Super Readers change the ending so that the hen tells the animals why she needs their help and they listen, enabling them to help her finish the corn bread so that she shares it with them.
