President Joe Biden said "history matters and the black story matters," a powerful statement that came after Florida State blocked the teaching of a new progressive African American course in its Washington, D.C. high schools. President Joe Biden said Monday. That "history matters and black history matters" at a White House party during Black History Month, a powerful statement that comes after Stan Florida blocked the teaching of a new progressive African-American course at his high school. "It's important for the entire country to say from the White House: History matters. History matters and the history of black things," Biden said to murmurs of approval from about 400 people in the East Room of the White House. We don't just choose to learn what we want to know. We learn what we need to know. We have to learn everything, the good, the bad, the truth and who we are as people. Biden added, "This is his great school, and he claims the class pushed a political agenda instead of teaching students history, but DeSantis' critics say he is censoring critical parts of American history and at least one Democratic governor, Phil Murphy of New Jersey," is increasing the number of schools, including Vice President Kamala Harris, the first black South Asian woman to hold the position, delivered a similar message at a White House dinner Monday: that black history is "America's history, living history, living history, breathing history, the story, which we create every day." Let's be clear on this point: As a nation, we will not build a better future for America by trying to erase its past," Harris said. Administration officials, including Defense Secretary Lloyd Austin and several dozen black lawmakers, were among hundreds of people who attended the White House celebration of Black History Month. During the event, Biden talked about his administration's harsh treatment of the black community, including the historic number of black women in federal judgeships and executive orders. Review police practices. But "we have to go on. We're not done yet," Biden said. He also paid historic homage to the divine nine, the nine President Joe Biden said history issues and black history issues are a powerful explanation that prevents a new forward in African -America study training for Florida Secondary School, with a strong explanation after the Florida state at the time of admission. It is important to say that the whole country can listen to the White House: History is important. Biden, the White House Eastern Zimmer, diminishes the agreement, the historical issues of black history and issues of about 400 people. I can't choose what we want to know. Let's find out what we should know. We have to learn everything, well, bad, truth and what we are nation. "He added Biden: "The great nations do it. "2024 Florida Governor Ronas Desantas. Potential Republican competitor against proposals against proposals, applied to the national level, rejecting forward settlement courses in schools, and said the class continues with a political agenda. Instead of studying history. Phil. Phil Murphy, Democratic Governor New Jersey, says he has expanded the number of schools presenting an improved course in this province. This was: this black history of America, the living story, the story of the history, the story we create every day. During the event, the Bidges reduced the success of the black community administration. Including an executive order to touch the federal justice and review police practice. But we have to go to the next step. We haven't finished yet. "Biden said. Brotherhood and women's home. When Harris entered Howard University, he promised one of the Alpha Kappa Alpha. I might be a white kid, but I'm not stupid, Biden said as the crowd laughed. I know where the American government is in black and white.
