Part Two: Article about local transport OR Story about important letter. Exercise Number: PET268 Exam Tip! 1. Plan your time carefully - you have 45 minutes to write both tasks. 2. Use paragraphs to organise your writing and make it easier to read. 3. Use linking words (however, although, therefore, so) to connect your ideas. 4. Always leave time at the end to check your grammar, spelling and punctuation. Cambridge B1 Preliminary (PET) Writing - Test Five Part One: Email to friend who joined a gym (about exercise timing and advice). Part Two: Article about shopping habits OR Story about lottery ticket. Exercise Number: PET269 Cambridge B1 Preliminary (PET) Writing - Test Six Part One: Email to friend learning to drive (about driving lessons and preparation). Part Two: Article about neighbourhood OR Story about restaurant experience. Exercise Number: PET270 Exam Tip! 1. Show range in your writing - try to use different vocabulary and grammar structures where appropriate. 2. Keep to the topic - don't include irrelevant information just to make your writing longer. 3. Make sure your writing has a clear beginning, middle and end. 4. Read the task carefully and make sure you understand exactly what type of text you need to write. Cambridge B1 Preliminary (PET) Writing - Test Seven Part One: Email to friend starting work from home (about workspace and concentration). Part Two: Article about local restaurants OR Story about midnight phone call. Exercise Number: PET271 Cambridge B1 Preliminary (PET) Writing - Test Eight Part One: Email to friend growing vegetables (about gardening advice). Part Two: Article about free time activities OR Story about old photograph. Exercise Number: PET272 The B1 Preliminary Writing test lasts 45 minutes and is composed of two parts. It contributes to 25% of your overall score. Part 1: Email Writing In the first section, candidates must craft an email that's approximately 100 words long. Don't worry about the exact word count; keeping it between 80 to 120 words is fine. An email and some notes will be given, and your job is to respond using those notes. This email is always informal, meant for a friend or family member. It's important to use all the notes provided, but try to rephrase them in your own words whenever possible. This part has a single question, and you can earn up to 20 marks for it. Part 2: Choice of Article or Story In the second section, candidates are required to write about 100 words on a topic they get to select. There's a choice between crafting an article or a story. Article: Typically, the article topics are simple and allow candidates to express their opinions. Story: When writing a story, candidates may be given the first sentence or a title to guide their writing. While stories may demand varied verb tenses and creativity, the choice between an article and a story depends on personal preference and skills. This section also carries a single question that can give you up to 20 marks. For further practice, you can check out our writing lessons on how to write an article and how to create a past story from a given sentence. General tips for the Writing part of the B1 PET Practice writing essays Familiarize yourself with the types of writing tasks required in the exam, such as an informal email or a story. Get feedback Ask someone to check your writing and give you constructive feedback; this can help you identify areas for improvement. Prepare a plan for the writing task Before writing your essay, you should consider the information you want to include and how to organize it. Think about the structure and content of your writing before you start, and make sure to stick to the word limit. Learn to manage your time Make sure you allocate enough time to read and understand the task and to plan and write your answer, leaving time to review and edit your work. Practise writing some compositions and time yourself to make sure you can finish the tasks within the time limits. Page 2 Articles wanted! TRAVEL Which is your favourite place to visit? Would you recommend others to go there? Why? Write an article answering these questions, and we will publish it in the library magazine! The Ultimate Travel Destination: Barcelona Do you love travelling to cities but need help deciding your next destination? Although many people would suggest going to London, Paris or Rome, my favourite is Barcelona. This Spanish treasure offers an incredible combination of culture, architecture, and entertainment. Can you imagine walking through the historic Gothic Quarter, then relaxing on the Barceloneta beach, and later visiting one of Gaudi's masterpieces? In addition, the local cuisine, especially the tapas, is one of the best foods I've ever tried. In my opinion, it's an experience you shouldn't miss. I strongly recommend Barcelona to anyone seeking a perfect mix of history and leisure. If I were you, I'd choose Barcelona. Trust me, it's worth every moment! If you want to learn more about how to do this task, check our lesson on how to write an article. Question 3 You must write a story for a writing competition. Your story must begin with this sentence: When we got out of the car, it was freezing. Lost in the snow When we got out of the car, it was freezing. Snow was everywhere, and the wind had made the path disappear. My sister was wearing her new coat, but it wasn't enough to keep her warm. We looked around and noticed that the snow had covered all the road signs. We were walking slowly, hoping to find some shelter. Then, we saw a light in the distance. As we approached, we realized it was a small cabin. Inside, a warm fire was burning. The owner told us he had seen our car and was waiting for us to come. We were grateful and spent the night there, safe from the cold. If you want to learn more about how to do this task, check our lesson on how to write a past story from a given sentence. The important thing at B1 is to be clear, consistent and organised. You don't need to write the next Charles Dickens novel, you just have to complete the task with good basic grammar, vocabulary, organisation and a little touch of style.Here we've got some top tips for the Preliminary (PET) writing paper and two sample tests for you to use as practice at home or in the classroom. Each one could be used for PET for schools or for the regular adult exam. The first part of the Cambridge B1 writing exam is an email. You will read an email that received from an English friend or family member. Next to this email, there are notes to include in your answer. You must answer the email in 100 words, including all the information from the notes. For more about how to write the perfect B1 PET Writing Part 1, take a look at our post about emails. The second part of the writing exam has two choices, an article or a story. Each one should be 100 words, but you only write one of them, not both. Some people prefer to practise one type of writing a lot to make it perfect, but it's always a good idea to be comfortable with both. Sometimes the topic of one writing is strange, so you may prefer the other one. If you only know how to write one type, this becomes a problem.These tips will help you maximise the opportunity for points in the Cambridge writing criteria. Each writing is given a mark out of 5 in Content, Communicative Achievement, Organisation and Language.Answer the question (Content) - You wouldn't believe how many people don't include all the necessary content in their answers. Part 1 is very controlled and has four notes along the side of each input text. In order to score points in the Content mark, you must clearly include answers to all four notes. For example, if the note say "suggest", pointing at a comment about what restaurant you'd like to go to, suggest a restaurant. It seems obvious, but it's the easiest way to both lose and gain points. In Part 2, you'll have a couple of content points in the article and less in the story, but you still need to stick to the topic. For example, if the story is about a day at the beach, don't write about a birthday party. Use paragraphs (Organisation) - Another easy fix, but one that can seriously affect the Organisation mark. Even though the text is only 100 words, there should generally be 2-3 paragraphs, clearly separated using a line gap or indentation. Write the correct writing (Content, Communicative Achievement) - If it's an email, it needs to look like an email with a simple "Hi" and "See you soon!" at the beginning and end. If it's an article, it should have a title. If it's a story, it should have a beginning, middle and end. The tone and style of each writing is slightly different too. Look at examples and consider what style is used. Punctuate (Organisation, Language) - Sometimes something as seemingly insignificant as a comma can completely change a writing. Be careful with sentences that are long, confusing and connected together with commas. Make sure you are finishing sentences when they are grammatically complete and not using incorrect punctuation. Use the past (Language) - To show you know B1 grammar, it's important to use the past. In almost every writing, you will have the opportunity to use the past to talk about something that happened to you. Don't forget to study the irregular verbs! Use some modal verbs (Language) - Another area of B1 language is modal verbs. Make a recommendation with "should" or talk about possibility with "can" or "can't". It's not advanced language, but it's something that shows you know B1 level English. Use a relative clause (Language) - If you want to score top points in Language, you have to attempt some complex grammar. Using subordinate clauses like relative clauses is a good way to do this. A sentence like "My brother, who lives in Miami, is going to visit me in Spain this summer" is a great way to include more complex grammar in your writing. Use basic linking words (Organisation, Language) - At B1, you don't need to use a huge variety of linking words, but you should use "and", "so", "but", "because" and possibly a few other more advanced ones like "however", "although" and "also". These should be used throughout all the writings. Make it interesting (Communicative Achievement) - You don't need to be an expert writer to write an interesting text. For example, there's a big difference between a story where the school closes because of a flood (interesting) and a day you went to school and did an exam (not interesting). The same applies to articles, if you write an article about travel and you talk about going on an adventure in Hawaii, it's more interesting than going to the local swimming pool every day. Keep it simple (Everything) - Remember that it's a B1 writing and in order to pass or even get high marks, you don't need to make it complicated. Use the language you know to write the best possible writing within the expectations of the task. Don't be afraid to attempt some complex things, but also make sure you do the basics well.Here are two full Preliminary (PET) writing sample tests. These have been designed in the same format as official exams to practise and improve in preparation for the B1 writing exam. Remember that the time limit to complete both parts of the Preliminary (PET) Writing exam is 45 minutes. The license may not give you all of the permissions necessary for your intended use. For example, other rights such as publicity, privacy, or moral rights may limit how you use the material. Time allowed - 12-17 minutes You will do the speaking test with another candidate. The two of you will meet two examiners. One of the examiners will talk to you, the other does not participate in the conversations. There are four parts to the speaking test: Speaking part 1: short questions and answers between you and the examiner. Speaking part 2: describe one colour photograph, talking for about 1 minute. Speaking part 3: make and respond to suggestions, discuss alternatives and negotiate agreement. Speaking part 4: discuss likes, dislikes, experiences, opinions, habits, etc. Scoring The Speaking section is worth 25% of the total score for the exam. How to prepare for B1 Preliminary Speaking Read this article explaining how to do well in the speaking exam. Read the instructions carefully before you start each section. Speak as much as you can, with your friends, family and classmates. Practise looking at photographs and speaking about them. Listen! The more English you listen to the better your will do.
